

A fool and his money

There's plenty of money to be made in the "recovery" that is sweeping the globe, but there's also plenty of money to be lost. What we're experiencing might indeed be a turnaround, or it might instead be a dead-cat bounce, a bull trap, a sucker's rally or whatever other expressive term you might want to use for a false hope. Can you name anything the optimistic politicians and bankers have done to actually correct the fundamental problems facing Western civilization, instead of merely masking them? When George Soros speaks about a recovery that regains half of what was lost on the way down, you'd better watch your wallet. Czechs seduced by the euphoria might want to trust the words of CEO Laurent Goutard of Komerční banka, who said the CR hasn't hit bottom yet. That doesn't mean there won't be opportunity. It just means that if you don't know when to get out, it might be better not to get in.

Heinrich Homola, Katarina Schapiro and Economia present

economia

DILTSinPrague

June 23rd, 2009 Kaiserštejnský palác

Alpha Leadership & Authentic Leadership seminar by Robert Dilts for his first time in Prague
Get ready for life after recession. Register at www.DILTSinPrague.cz