the fleet sheet's final word

No. 2521 Free subscriptions at subscribe@fsfinalword.com Fri., Dec. 31, 2010

Taxiing into the New Year 🛛 투

If you go out partying tonight, don't expect to have an easy time finding a cab ride home. And if you booze it up a bit, which every self-respecting person should, make sure to watch your wallet while paying the driver. The Czech taxi business has long been known for its elements of criminal capitalism, and as recently as Aug. a police inspection found that half of the taxi drivers at Prague Airport were committing violations, mainly overcharging. Using a reputable dispatcher was long thought to be a way to avoid such rip-offs, but higher fuel rates and living costs this year led to the increased prevalence of trick capitalism among dispatchers too. Take the CR's largest service, AAA radiotaxi, for example. It raised its prices in April and made it impossible to know the rate in advance, unless you specifically ask on the phone or pay by invoice. It still has a price calculator on its website, but it's basically useless. If you get scammed tonight, look on the bright side. Your monetary loss is a bottle of sekt for the poor cabbie.

<section-header>

We wish all our readers a very Happy New Year!