

Petr Hájek - the Czech Donald Trump

Despite the obvious differences, Petr Hájek is in a sense the Czech Donald Trump. Both have perfected the art of attracting attention with their eccentric ideas, and both are dismissed by rivals and the mainstream media as a joke. Some of their comments are indeed confused or bizarre, yet an objective analysis shows that their views are in most cases legitimate. Why did it take Obama so long to release his long-form birth certificate? Wasn't Osama indeed a sort of "media fiction" that replaced the Soviet Union as the bogeyman? Hájek never said bin Laden didn't exist, and those who impute this to him largely fall into two categories. Either they've been so brain-washed by the media and government propaganda that they aren't capable of rational analysis, or they are active, willing participants in the charade. One doesn't have to like Trump or Hájek to learn something from them about how the world works.
