Dienstbier, Hulinský, Čalfa

Sen. Jiří Dienstbier, who is positioning himself as the moral conscience of ČSSD, wants his party colleague Petr Hulinský to leave politics because of his shenanigans as supervisory-board chair of city-controlled PRE energy company. Dienstbier cites an MFD article claiming that Hulinský, or people close to him, were on both sides of the table in the allocation by PRE of sponsorship money for the handicapped. Perhaps the strangest aspect of this is that Dienstbier used to work for Marián Čalfa, who served as Hulinský's "house counsel" and helped to set up the structure being used to shuffle the money around. Čalfa is no longer a lawyer - he has been stricken from the Czech bar - but is still listed as a partner at Čalfa Bartošík. He is also now on PRE's board. Dienstbier's admirable effort to clean up Prague city hall is stained by the reality that he was in bed for many years with the same people he is now criticizing.
