

Opposition agreement 2

Imagine for a moment that Miloš Zeman gets his way and organizes a new ČSSD-ODS opposition agreement after the elections. A routine press conference might look something like this: Speaker of the House Martin Kuba of ODS sits at the head of the table, flanked by Vice PM Michal Hašek of ČSSD (or will it be PM?) and Pres. Petr Kužel of the Economic Chamber (who works eagerly with any regime). Only a representative of SPOZ is missing. Kuba announces an important new legislative initiative that will be yet another breakthrough in cross-party cooperation and vows to send the bill to Parliament within two months. It will bring greater transparency, he pledges, and Hašek and Kužel present a critical but ultimately supportive rebuttal that makes it clear that they're on board too. Oops, sorry, that wasn't fiction, that was Kuba's and Hašek's actual press conference on Mon. announcing an amendment to the public-procurement law. Nice of them to make their intentions clear, but will the Zeman-Hašek-Kuba troika have the votes?

Read this later today in Czech

Spojujeme síly.
We are joining forces.

Od 1. března 2013 pracujeme společně pro naše klienty v Česku a na Slovensku jako Dvořák Hager & Partners.

From 1 March 2013 we will serve our clients in the Czech Republic and Slovakia as Dvořák Hager & Partners.

Právní služby pro byznys
v Česku a na Slovensku

Law Firm for Business in the Czech Republic and Slovakia

dvořák || hager & partners
advokátní kancelář

www.dhplegal.com