Who's the biggest godfather?

Miloš Zeman said in his inaugural address that he wants to fight against "islands of negative deviation" and that one of these are the "godfather mafias that parasite on the body of Czech society and suck blood" from it. He didn't say who these vampire squids are. VV Chair Vít Bárta nevertheless told Právo he is glad that Zeman unequivocally addressed the problem of godfathers. Bárta took to the airwaves yesterday and declared on OVM that Andrej Babiš of Agrofert is the person doing the most damage to the Czech economy by making food expensive. But when F1 radio asked Bárta last month who the capo di tutti capi is, he didn't name Babiš. Nor did he name Jurečko, Hrdlička, Janoušek, Soukup, Kellner, Chrenek, Bakala, Komárek, Tkáč or Dospiva. Instead he named Radek Pokorný, who happens to be the lawyer and good friend of Zeman's first unspoken target as president, ČSSD Chair Bohuslav Sobotka.
