

A daily e-mail bulletin of Czech wit & wisdom. For your free subscription, write to subscribe@fsfinalword.com

Who won the elections?

Andrej Babiš's three-year old movement ANO won the most votes in the municipal elections, but only 6.49% of eligible voters actually voted for it. (It won 14.59% of the total votes, and voter turnout was 44.5%.) The percentage is only slightly higher when only the votes in areas where ANO had candidates are counted. In large cities, ANO won 19.34% of the vote, with a voter turnout of 33.77%, giving it the support of 6.53% of the eligible voters in the cities. When Adriana Krnáčová seeks to form an ANO-led coalition in Prague, she'll be speaking for only 8.33% of the city's eligible voters. (ANO won 22.08% of the vote, and the turnout was 37.72%). A full 91.67% of Prague voters didn't want her party or didn't bother to say they did. Can we really say that she "won" the elections? If this is a revolution, it's one supported by a very small slice of the population. It takes an audacious leader to draw any other conclusion from these elections.

Read this later today in Czech

OPEN DAY
Tuesday 14th October

Kamýk site: K Lesu 558/2, Prague 4
Vlastina site: Vlastina 500/19, Prague 6
www.pbschool.cz/openday
+420 226 096 200

