What if the fake news were true?

What if the conspiracy theories about the origin and purpose of the coronavirus were true and a small group of people within the international elite were using the public-health crisis to engineer a reset of the global economy and the world order? What if the new mRNA vaccines were truly designed to disrupt the reproductive capabilities of young people as a way to manage a decline in the world's population to a sustainable level and to bring human activity more into accord with the natural planetary order? Or what if a new virus or strain were used to attack mainly those who have been vaccinated? What if those in control shared the view of Václav Havel, expressed in the New York Times in Sept. 2007, that we have a responsibility toward future generations to deal with the problems of today's world and that it means making a moral decision about what action is acceptable or responsible?

If the fake news about covid were revealed to be true, would it change anything?
